ASTORIA, OREGON

PORTLAND, April 6.—The cauliflower crop this year in the garden districts tributary to Portland will be little if any more than half the usual output, according to reports that are now reaching the Front street dealers. Too much cool, wet weather and not enough sunshine during the maturing season are given as the reasons for the partial failure of the crop.

What is said to be the last car of California celery for this market this season came in yesterday. There is some celery in cold storage in the city, and this is reported to be holding up better than the late arrivals of fresh stuff from the South. Good quality celery was quoted firm at $5 a crate today.

Cabbage is firm and higher in the South. A car on Imperial Valley product is due within a few days, and it is expected that the stuff will sell at $4.50 a crate.

New California potatoes are now coming in quite freely, and prices as a consequence show a downward trend. Today the best were quoted at 5 to 6 cents a pound.

In other vegetables there were no developments of importance today. Sweet potatoes are selling in a slow way at $2.25 to $2.50 a hundred. Asparagus is weakening slightly, prices today being 6 to 10 cents a pound for the California article, which limited offerings of Oregon grass were available at 65 cents a dozen. The steamers brought in the usual assortment of green stuff from the South.

Butter Market Is Weakening.

Another cut in butter prices is expected about the middle or latter part of this, the result of the downward movement in the South. With the San Francisco market on a 23-cent basis, California is shipping large quantities of butter to the local and Sound markets, and a further decline here is regarded as inevitable.

Eggs and Poultry Moving.

The egg market showed a degree of strength today, in part due to the demand on account of the Easter trade and in part to the continued northern call. There was no carry-over of consequence from yesterday, and the indications were that the arrivals today would be practically cleaned up before the close of business. Dealers quoted 21 to 22 cents.

For everything in the poultry line the demand is good, with fat hens and broilers and fryers especially wanted. Arrivals thus far this week have been but moderate, and the outlook is for a good market to the end of the week.
